Tulalip Tribes Grant Report

August 1, 2026

Code: Q4 2025 14.2

<https://www.harvestagainsthunger.org>

Total number of recipients impacted: 2 million statewide

During fiscal year 2025 (July 1, 2025 to June 30, 2026), we are proud to report the impact of our work in Snohomish County and Skagit County.

Snohomish County

Harvest Against Hunger (HAH) operates three programs in Snohomish County: Farm to Food Pantry (F2FP), Growing for Good (GFG), and Washington Gleaning Network.

F2FP and GFG

The F2FP and GFG programs are part of our Farm to Community initiative. F2FP was launched in 2014 in partnership with Washington State Department of Agriculture and GFG was launched in 2020 in partnership with PCC Community Markets and Seattle Neighborhood Farmers Markets.

Both programs provide technical support, ongoing management, and funding to hunger relief organizations to purchase produce directly from local small to mid-scale growers at wholesale prices. In Snohomish County, our hunger relief partners are Arlington Community Food Bank, Darrington Food Bank, Maltby Food Bank, Snohomish Community Food Bank, and Snohomish Healing Project. In FY26, they purchased a total of 14,487 pounds of fresh produce and healthy food from the following 12 farms:

Around The Table

Caruso Farm

Garden Treasures Farm

Meadowlark Farm

North Fork Packing

Present Tense Farm

Primal Compounds Farm

Radicle Roots

Reconnecting Roots

Sky Valley Family Farm

Skylight Farms

Tualco Valley Farm

These 12 farms received $51,527 from our five hunger relief partners. Below is a testimonial from Arlington Food Bank:

“Participating in the F2FP program this past year allowed us to offer an unprecedented variety of fresh, local produce to our clients---many of whom had never had consistent access to such high-quality fruits and vegetables. One major success was the increase in community engagement: clients expressed more interest in cooking, healthy eating and even planting seeds we provided to grow their own produce! Our volunteers took great pride in distributing food grown by our local farms and highlighting each farm regularly. The program not only nourished bodies, it also helped strengthen community connections around food and local agriculture.”

Washington Gleaning Network (WGN)

WGN is a coordinated, statewide effort that strengthens community-based food systems by bringing together farmers, volunteers and local gleaning groups to collect produce from farmers’ fields after harvest that would otherwise go to waste.

WGN organized a Blueberry Superglean at Mountainview Blueberry Farm, Snohomish, in September 2025 at which 60 volunteers from food banks, church groups, and Rotary Clubs collected 200 pounds of blueberries that were donated to local hunger relief organizations.

Cooperating to Feed Community

When the federal government shut down last November and SNAP benefits weren’t being paid, we partnered with PCC Community Markets to launch Cooperating to Feed Community. This was a rapid response campaign to raise and distribute funds to help local hunger relief organizations access and purchase much-needed food items through direct purchasing from wholesalers, packers, and farmers. In total, the campaign raised $334,000. Snohomish Food Bank Coalition received $26,500.

Skagit County

Harvest Against Hunger (HAH) operates three programs in Skagit County: Our Core Work, Farm to Food Pantry (F2FP), and Washington Gleaning Network.

Core Work

Through our Core Work, we locate truckload-sized donations (40,000 lbs.) of imperfect yet healthy produce, coordinate harvesting and packaging, identify a hunger relief organization that needs it and arrange donated or discounted transportation to deliver it. In FY26, we moved 156,800 pounds of potatoes to Skagit Food Distribution Center, Sedro Woolley which distributes food to hunger relief organizations throughout Skagit, Island and San Juan counties.

F2FP

In Skagit County, our two primary hunger relief partners are Community Action of Skagit County and Helping Hands Food Bank. In FY26, they purchased a total of 8,953 pounds of fresh produce and healthy food from the following 18 farms:

Boldly Grown Farm	Mejia Romero Farm
Bow Hill Cherries	Mizpa Farm
Cabrera Farms	Mountain Song Meadow
First Cut Farm	Pleasant Prairie Farm
Foothills Farm	Ralph's Greenhouse
Harts Farm & Homestead	The Crows Farm
Hayton Farms	Two Owls Farms
Hedlin Farm	Waxwing Farm
Long Hearing Farm	Well Fed Farm

These 18 farms received $27,624 from Community Action of Skagit County and Helping Hands Food Bank. Below is a testimonial from Helping Hands Food Bank:

“The increased availability of fresh produce acquired through this grant was a boon for our participants this year. With the increased cost of fresh foods, our participants were extremely appreciative what we were able to bring in.”

WGN

On a stunning summer morning in the Skagit Valley last July, volunteers gathered at Bow Farmhouse near Bow, WA, for a special blueberry glean hosted by Skagit Gleaners. The event brought together community members and partner organizations from all over the state to pick blueberries for hunger relief. The picturesque u-pick blueberry farm buzzed with activity as volunteers picked their way down the vibrant rows of bushes, baskets and buckets quickly filling with plump, ripe berries!

In total, the day's efforts yielded an impressive 150 pounds of blueberries, with nine volunteers lending their time and energy. Skagit Gleaners coordinated the event with four participating organizations: WGN, University District Food Bank, Community Action of Skagit County, and Christ the King Farm and Food Share.

The blueberries were donated to area food banks and families in need, amplifying the impact of this community effort. A beautiful sense of community was felt here, as everyone worked together to gather as much fruit as possible.
