THE PROJECT AND RESULTS

Warm Beach Camp offers summer camp programs for children and youth that are designed to provide fun, recreation, and the opportunity to learn new things, gain social and life skills and make new friends. A week of summer camp often results in memories that last a lifetime.

While summer camps have changed over the years, today camps include things like high ropes course and climbing tower adventures, many traditional activities still remain, like singing around a campfire and hiking in the woods. With so many kids living in urban settings surrounded by a high-tech culture, a week in the outdoors, experiencing the beauty of nature is more important than ever!

For children and youth who are disadvantaged or at-risk, this is particularly true. Kids who have one or both parents who are incarcerated, or who live in foster care, or are homeless, will often thrive in the summer camp setting. Placed in a cabin group of children their own age, these kids experience an environment where everyone is equal, and the group becomes a family for the week. Any stigma they feel from their lives at home is left behind, and they are free to just be kids having fun together.

To help make this experience possible, WBC had a project last summer called the 2017 Summer Camp Assistance Project, providing scholarship funds to enable at-risk and disadvantaged children and youth to attend a week of summer camp here.

Through this project, WBC provided assistance to 290 campers who were at-risk or disadvantaged. Thirteen of those were kids who have one or both parents who are incarcerated. The assistance for them totaled $7,440. These kids were from the Angel Tree program and Eagle Outreach Ministries.

WBC also provided assistance campers who are in foster care, or for families with adopted or foster kids. Assistance totaling $29,311 was provided to a total of 255 individuals. These came from Tree House, Overlake Christian Church, or the Department of Social and Health Services (D.S.H.S.).

There were 22 kids who came from homeless or disadvantaged families with $10,370 provided in assistance to come to camp. These children and youth came from Seattle's Union Gospel Mission, the Everett Gospel Mission, Housing Hope, and Compassion House.

Altogether, the assistance provided for these at-risk kids totaled $47,121. WBC believes that the camp experience can change the life of a child and strengthen the impact of the work being done by the organizations who work with these children and youth year-round.

In reaching out to at-risk and troubled youth, a strong recreational program of challenging and fun activities is crucial in drawing them into camp, getting them involved, and holding their interest. Activities like the High Ropes Course and the Climbing Tower provide opportunities for fun, non-threatening interaction where they are all equal. Trust-building, competition, and team dynamics replace confrontation. In the process, new relationships are created and social skills are learned.

WBC also sponsors an annual camp program for families with adopted children or who are fostering children. This program is called, "Refreshed Family Camp." This camp brings the entire family together in an experience structured to provide support and dialog about the issues faced by families with these relationships. The program creates opportunities and experiences that help build and strengthen family relationships. This was the fifth year for this camping program, and the size of the camp is growing each year. Last year, there were nearly 420 participants.

Kids today are more plugged in than ever before, but they say they don't feel close to anyone. They long to know their life matters. A week of camp provides hope, friendships, significance, connections, and can set their life direction on a new and better course.

Warm Beach Camp is very grateful for the support of the Tulalip Tribes Charitable Contributions Fund in helping to make it possible for these kids to attend a week of summer camp.
